volume 23

When Southern University moved to Birminghom in 1918, the city was young and small. The people who moved the college put it on a stony hump on Enon Ridge, the northern rim of Jones Valley. Town was, the brochure said, only an eight to ten minute bicycle ride away, and the campus only 1½ miles from the city limit. In the valley, down where Third Avenue runs now, was a little creek and a sizable swamp, and Five Points West was still a dahlia nursery, but over to the west of the college, the steel mills were already industriously spewing smoke and fumes into a graying sky.

Since then the city has expanded, taken in new land and changed the land. The creek no longer has its swamp, although it now stinks in continuous, sullen rebellion to urbanization. Dahlias, too, seem to grow just as well on less profitable ground, but the steel mills have endured and grown and been joined by other mills, making atmospheric purity a dim, mythical image in the municipal memory.

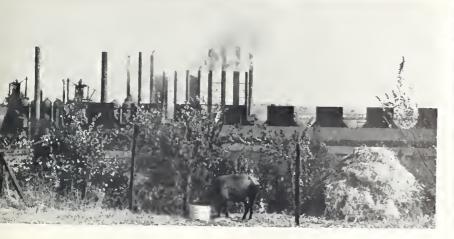

Steel has for so long been theme and center of Birmingham's story and of Birmingham-Southern's. Steel brought money to Birmingham and because the people in Birmingham who wanted a college had some of that money and Southern University of Greensboro had none, the college came. And all the while, as the city grew and rechanneled its creeks and dried up swamps, absorbed farms and spilled over out of its valley, Birmingham influenced this college far beyond the facts of name and location. Never, until the last few years, had anyone realized how completely this city and the region from which it draws its life have permeated the life and attitudes of the callege and the minds and spirits of the college's people. Never have we been forced so persistently to the harsh task of analyzing and evaluating the true meaning of these few acres of rocky, poor—farm dirt; to the deep realization that the forces which stoke the furnaces have seldom fed the fires of the intellect.

Whot we're really trying to do in this book, and maybe it isn't even our job, is to impress you with the single historical fact of having lived in Birmingham during the past year. Our purpose is to help, or even make, you recall how things in this town and nation looked to you in that year. Without making a value judgment for you, we want you to remember exactly how it was in this city in May, 1963. We would have you remember watching the rioters and riot-watchers gather in the afternoon, the great hairy cops with carbines and shotguns, the smell of old pine shacks burning in the night down in the black ghetto.

Remember, long ofter you've forgotten your spring quorter point overage or S.G.A. elections or who you doted that spring, that ten blocks from you, Americo changed. There wos, really, little noise and little poin for such a great battle, the meeting of hundred year old adversaries in Kelly Ingram's park. Remember, too, how deeply you were touched and untouched by it all; how strongly you pulled for whichever side was yours and how happy or sod you were at the end of each day, and remember how, during Birmingham's slow crucifixion, you went to class and took tests and sat in the cafeteria drinking your iced teo.

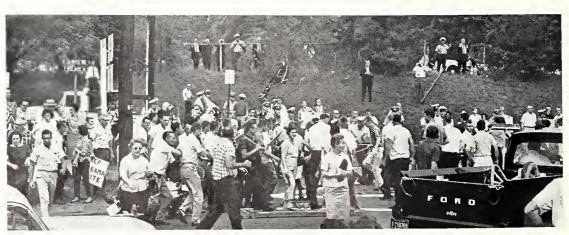

In speaking of the past year and how it affected students on this campus, there is no way to amit Navember 22, 1963, and, really, little use to remind you that on that day two bullets struck and blew away most of Jahn Kennedy's head. Surely, you must remember exactly where you were and what you were doing when you heard of the shooting and, later, of the death. It was during finals, and most of us spent the whole weekend watching the reports and funeral an television, knowing of the necessity far study, but yielding to the greater demond of seeing in the formalized grief of Jahn Kennedy's funeral the true meaning of being an American, and seeing this more clearly than Americans have since Warld War II.

These two events, the Negro Revolution and the assassination, formed the backdrap upon which we played our individual lives. There is no need here to recount the specific facts. There will be books and magazines—thousands of words—to set them down. We're in no danger of lasing from our national history exactly what happened and when, but this is the only book intended to help you recall the way it was with you in that time.

"This is all very fine," you may say, "but what af my specific life; what daes this actually mean to me?" It is really amazing, and frustrating, too, the mundane things which accupy us even in the midst af great and portentous times. After everyane, as we all did, took a few solitary moments to evaluate the enduring relevance in our individual lives of these events, after the secret interior cataloging and filing was over, the surface flow of our lives went on as before. No one may say in what exact direction or degree another's life was moved, but there is no doubt that each life was shaded in same way by the erratic mood and tempo af the past year. If our recent history was the canvas upon which each inscribed his own tiny and personal motif, we must all wonder what marks we left on that canvas, an ourselves, and on each other.

The image of the self-cansciaus callege student, crusading, meditating, subjectifying his whole environment, has became as much o part of the American popular culture as the cancept of the frenetic teenager. The fact that parents and teachers loak back an their youthful struggles with patronizing amusement daesn't really alter the immediacy of aur own struggles. And whether for good or ill, this callege has a way af rendering these problems immediate and imperative and af creating a deep seated disturbance that ane may avaid in the onanymity and passivity af a larger, mare undemanding schaal. The decision of chaosing a niche in the pocked and shelved wall of society; the hape af maybe daing samething a little beyond forty hours, two weeks paid, nice house and kids; the gnawing recurrence of an insane idea, of really having enough guts to put those fine discussion group ideas into your actual life—all these demand resalution; all of them lie with you at night and ga with you in your waking like an ald man's wet-weather ache.

There is a way ta survive, though. When the big questions—those af future, ambition, and sanity—became tao great, you can always submit to the mesmerism of campus life. There is no navacain so complete, no numbness so sublime as the complex, non-crucial routine af subsisting an this campus. Among labs and library carrels, with erudite, unthinking research in beige-walled dorm rooms you can actually accomplish the difficult task of lasing yourself—from yourself.

Surely, there must be some here who are either sa well adjusted ar sa uncanscious to begin with that such a spiritual vacation at some time during four years is not necessary. But most of us, soan ar late, become sa suffocated that nerveless absorption with the task of learning is a welcame respite. It is like living by an autline, form without content, in which the spirit is an abjective and uncancerned spectator to the pasturings of its body.

It is very easy to fall into the habit of labeling that which we are too lazy to analyze or unable to define as intangible, and you have probably heard it said that Southern has such a quality, same pervading essence which draws and halds people to it. Southern does have an intangible, or at least an elusive, quality which sets it apart; but this feeling praduces estrangement and affection, loyalty and distaste in relatively equal amounts.

It is this quality which produces our need for occasional self isolation and which spawns the perennial talk of tronsfer to a more attractive, sophisticated campus. Paradoxically, the same aspect of life at Sauthern brings us back each year in spite of our protestations and creates in us a grudging, but tenacious, affection.

If we cannot pinpaint what it is about this schaal that belongs uniquely to it, at least it is not difficult to say when it operates mast strangly; when this hill becames a camplete world for you, detached from outside ties af location and affection; when you feel like a tiny, sterilized bearing in a great, slow grinding gear, and there is a persistent heat behind your eyes that means you are tarn between an absolute hate and repulsion for every person here and a staggering need to have just ane person care if you now ar ever walk down that cold hill in the early marning. The time when it really gets you is winter quarter.

December, January, and February as they are in Birminghom are months which shouldn't hoppen to any year, any place. It's cold-a damp, garment penetrating cold that defies the feeble old point-caked radiators, the kind you can lean against and get a streak of warmth up the back of each thigh and buttock while the rest of your body remains as chill as the rest of the roam. Just the cold wouldn't really be so bad, but for the roin coming slow and steady for weeks on end until the quadrongle becomes spongy underfoot and crisscrossed with little dams of dead grass. Everyday in class you sit and feel the moisture slip through your shoes, quietly assured that someone has walked off with the umbrella you left dripping in the hall. The finol thing about winter here, though, is the utter and total grayness that makes the buildings uglier even than they are and the people seem ashen and wilted. Too, over all is the industrial stench of Birmingham, which corries on the wet air and strikes you on the day's first door opening. For many, that smell of Birmingham on a cold, gray, 7 o'clock morning before the sun burns the vapors away must be the enduring mental abbreviation for that pernicious depression that stalks us all in the winter.

It is this internal burden, engendered and nurtured in solitude, which inevitably sends a few home before the work is done. But each of us, too, labors under an external burden that is very much a part of this college and constitutes its biggest problem: Administrationism.

Administrationism means that total foscination with antiseptic account books and impersonal grade point averages which characterizes second floor Munger. It's what gives you the feeling that they would gladly socrifice your present or future happiness, career—even burn your body—just to keep the books in balance. Administrationism is what causes your throat to constrict and your hands to get sweaty when you stand there trying to schedule a class or find out how many hours and quality points you need. You know that its not a question of if anything is wrong; just how wrong.

It is really omazing that such a tremendous body of regulotions and procedures can occrue around the task of directing one thousand lives. After awhile, you actually begin to think of yourself as a being composed of polarities of obedience and non-obedience cought amid the subtle manifestations of the gap between the leaders and the mosses: the sidewalks that don't go where onyone wonts to walk, but serve only to awkwordly circumnovigate chain-guarded areas where gross seed have been spread on the rocks; the convocations called simply because every week has a Wednesday; the fact that the college employs someone who zeolously tickets unstickered cars on a campus where parking has never been a problem. There is a deeper schism, too. One occasioned not by lock of communication but by obsence of common purpose. One that fosters evosiveness, furtiveness, and a "get by" attitude among us, and is evidenced by the fact that so many officials work so tirelessly ot holding us to a system of behavior which has little relevance to our education and which many have found personally unfeasible.

And so the college contributes its part to our seasonal withdrawal and introspection. And Southern can really expect little loyalty toward the institution itself as long as it adheres to a policy of rules made to fit the occasion and after the fact. Little loyalty will come as long as novigating among the existing rules, policies, and practices continues to remind us of daily going to the same stone wall, backing off ten equal paces and daily running headlong into that wall.

Occasionally, even here, a person may realize that there is a remedy far that lump of laneliness, frustration, and impatience which lies day and night in your stamach; that makes you want to scream obscenities at naon in the cafeteria, or drive far away for a few days, just get a motel room and wonder if you've been missed. But every now and then another person comes swimming out of their kin, and the hazy dream of two lives merge into a new definition. The meeting needn't be beautiful, the dialogue cool, nor anyone particularly dashing; the only requirement is another person real enough at that particular moment to snap you back out of yourself. The stary isn't new, and we have no special claim to it. Probably the script is pretty much the same everywhere at any time, but the special joy of giving a mutual damn, of a warm and opposite body makes the routine bearable. Just having another human point to oim at can give you a new courage and flair for life.

Life here, though, is set within boundaries of time: September and May, Christmas and Spring, and when the threads of continuity and rapport are broken by obsence, short or long, you may never find that same person again. Neither is this the place for permanence nor the time in your life for losting, and the sadness lies in knowing that the difference from the way it was before is really within yourself.

It isn't very hard to figure out what to do then; follow the old routine. Everything hos waited, conspiring, knowing that you would come full circle bock to yourself alone again. Then draw yourself up into the smallest space onto the most easily defended ground. There, still, are the books and the long, long walk across the quad, past the concrete circle where the sun dial used to be, between two ugly buildings made bearable by the night.

Who is he, this man of many faces? A fifty-year-old boy wonder who . . . plays tennis two hours every day looks at home in a heavy fog with damp cigar and his hands in his pockets fears nothing except bats in a dark room can step onstage and into any character can muke a girl smoke a cigar and pretend to like it continually receives top halves for his glasses plays first trash can, last chair in the symphony of the absurd can give a 98-pound girl courage to climb a 60-foot ladder and hang curtains on non-existent rods collects more disciples daily—and deserves them dares to present the new and often misunderstood stops what he's doing to chase moths demands the impossible—and gets it manages to be the forboding professor and still keep his classes laughing understands both tragic and comic, the reasonable and the absurd Who is this man? His many faces demand many names:

Dwight Isbell died in an automobile accident, during the summer of 1963. He would have been a senior this year.

In life, he would likely have disdained such tributes as annuals usually give. We affer this page, then, only to recall ta you Dwight as you may have known him. Here we shall say only true things of him. They will suffice.

Dwight was the dominating intellectual force among the students, and he respected the responsibilities of this often unenviable position. Above all, Dwight Isbell possessed the high seriousness of the true scholar.

Far many years Birmingham-Sauthern has aperated, and correctly sa, under the theory that maintaining an able faculty should take precedence over the construction of an imposing physical plant. More than half of the sixty-nine faculty members hald dactarate degrees, and they average approximately fifteen years of teaching experience. Unlike many institutions, Sauthern places classroom performance and interest in the pupil ahead of research and publication.

The callege's major problem is not recruiting, but halding, able faculty members, since Sauthern has become a hunting ground for schools from other parts of the country.

president

President and Mrs. Phillips entertain with a faculty tea.

Dr. Haward Mitchell Phillips, Sr., is serving his first year as the sixth president of Birmingham-Southern Callege. He has filled the positions of professor of biology and dean of the graduate school, Emory University, and president of Alabama Callege, Mantevalla.

Dr. Phillips received his B.S. and M.A. degrees fram Wake Forest Callege, and his Ph.D. fram the University of Virginia. He is a member af Phi Beta Kappo, Omicron Delta Kappo, Sigma Xi, and Pi Kappa Alpha.

In his public statements, Dr. Phillips has avoided lip-service to highly idealistic goals in favar of the more realistic goals of money, expansion, and recruitment.

In referring to his "Master Plan", Dr. Phillips made the fallowing statement, June, 1963, immediately after he assumed his affice.

Our assignment will not be easy; it will require exceptionally hard work, dedication, cooperation and a tremendaus amount of maney. It will demand an understanding attitude and a zealaus commitment on the part of oll of us. We shall begin immediately to project out new goals.

Southern for many years has had sufficent goals, aims, and mottoes; naw it is haped that under the leadership of Dr. Phillips she will receive the physical means to make the ideal a reality.

President's Home.

activities

The title "activities" is vague and camprehensive enough to cover the diverse functions included herein. It should be noted that arganized functions are within the realm of the gung-ho and that the average student still depends on the more spantaneous and personal amusements.

Spring is a trying time for scholars. After diligently developing fine minds all winter, some actually discover that they do have bodies and give themselves over to such glandular pursuits as houseparties and creek-banking.

Southern's official meons of safely channeling the vernal energy is May Day. The 1963 May Day entailed a concert by the pradigal falk duet of Richard & Jim, field events and allowing girls to wear bermuda shorts in class. As if this wasn't enough blatant indecency, there was dancing in the street during the evening. Despite so much careful planning, however, May Day 1963 managed to be quite a lot of fun.

Rush means talking to people you don't knaw, about things you don't care about. Rush takes a week, starting with heat and thunder, and ending in apathy. What rush really does is determine the course of Greek campetition for the coming year, and there is no lack of hard nose campetitiveness as each graup strives to lure young and unwary individuals into the warmth of its collective bosam.

Rush may be hard sell ar saft sell, but it always boils dawn to the basic, and not always pleasant, fact af acceptance or rejection.

Judges cheerfully look over the contestants.

After the student vote, twenty-five semi-finalists faced the judges . . . charmingly.

When thinking of things distinctly 'Southern, one must not amit the Southern Accent Pageant. The pageant is conducted in a fashion similar to the Miss Alabama Contest and engenders the same spirit of good ald American cut-throat competition. While the male papulation looks on in bemused detachment, the contestants, cheered on by the various sisterhoods, really turn on the snow as the veneer of gentility wears thinner and thinner and the distance between smile and snear progressively lessens.

The Pageant itself is usually well attended, and with reason. Far if the air of suspense is a little cantrived, the entertainment is usually worth the admission price. The Jaurneymen gave a competent, even if somewhat dispirited, performance while the judges deliberated and a sudden thunderstarm reminded everyane that their car windows were down.

Editor: Jeannie Meadows

One sure way to start an argument is to bring up the subject of fraternities and sarorities. With a membership of over fifty percent of the student body, the Greeks are the dominoting farce in the student power structure, that is in the very little power that students have. At any rate, membership is virtually a pre-requisite in the honoraries race.

In any debate, the Greeks are at a disadvantage in that they accept as a basic premise the rather tenuous proposition that fifty ar so people can actually be best friends when, in reality, the ties of brotherhood often have a chapping effect. Too, the anti-Greeks always yell conformity. Well, if the members of each fraternity or sorority da mave as a graup, at least each graup has a distinctive, if not always sovory, flavar, and omusingly enaugh, each and every order cherishes the deep seated belief that they are the only real people.

Sauthern's Greeks must be given credit as one of the major farces in drawing students here and one of the stronger factors in halding them. Greek groups also provide a cansistent social life for their members beyond that affered by the inadequate, cut and dried school pragram.

Women's Intramurals:
Diane Manasco

On Thonksgiving Day, 1940, the Birmingham-Southern footboll teom, composed of twenty-two men, defeoted Howard College 9 to 6, and intercollegiate football of Southern was finished forever. Intramurals were set up that year, and plans were made for such pursuits as horsemanship, fencing, and soccer. Since then, the P. E. deportment has settled for less oristocratic activities, but the more ordinary sports continue to occupy a surprisingly large amount of leisure time and interest.

Fraternity sports are followed with great enthusiasm and usually amount to little more than legalized moyhem and organized hostility as everyone gives their all for "The Brothers." Sorority basketball and softball games combine to help destroy any vestigial traces of the myth of Southern womanhood.

When Southern discontinued football, it settled on the more inexpensive and sophisticated games of tennis and bosketball. This year a golf team has been started, perhaps in anticipation of the back forty being converted into a much promised eighteen hale course.

The tennis team has the advantage of appealing to those who really enjoy their sport and the disadvantage of a lack of experienced players. The Southern team suffers from the lack of scholarships. Most players participate out of their love for the game and are to be commended for this.

Mr. Leslie Longshore, in his first year as tennis caach, brings a great deal of playing and coaching experience to his position and will certainly inject a new vitality into the program.

Editor: Nancy Murphree

Southern is pregnant with organizations. It is the great haunt and true home af the organization man, but arganization with a little "o" for at Southern one collects rather than works for organizations.

Organizations grow and fade at Southern like mushrooms in a dank cellar. We had only to rid ourselves of P. E. and I.H.S. (In His Service) before Psychology and Alpha Phi Omega burst forth in regimented and newly mimeographed splendor. Most organizations vaguely classify themselves as being "service" groups. There are "service" organizations for all ages and sexes(such as Sophomore Women's, Senior Men's, ad infinitum), as well as for most known or admitted problems, needs, and denominations. The campus is saved from total servility only by the fact that none of them do anything beyond meeting and planning, and that mast members consider the elections of officers to be their major purpose for existence anyway. Never have the vineyards of the Lord been so amply staffed with so many listless toilers.

The Student Government Association has received several unfartunate breaks in the past few years. One of these is the fact that its initials fit perfectly into the mack-religious theme song of a Walt Disney production dating from our early teens: Mic-Key-MoSGA. The second, and most unfartunate, of these breaks is that the group fits the song's cannotations as well as its initials fit the meter.

Actually, the reasan for S.G.A.'s perennial impatence is so obvious that we usually overloak it entirely. The word "government" implies that the association has the power to pass rules and the sanctions to enforce them. Our S.G.A., like that on most campuses, passesses neither the power nar the sanctions. So, it isn't that they don't want to do anything; they move and second and pass, propose and resolve with enthusiasm and high seriousness. They just can't.

S.G.A. daes serve ane majar function, that of bookkeeper far the $14,000 paid by students for the remarkably evasive purpose of Student Activities. Sometimes they allocate this money carrectly, usually indifferently, but all too often they screw even this function up. In full view of the financial record of the 1963 annual, which operated an a very tight budget, and far the first time in several years, finished in the black by less than $100, the S.G.A. cut the budget of the 1964 Accent by $400. The result of this astute financing is that each student must now pay $.50 for an annual whose cast is supposed to be covered in his quarterly Student Activities payments.

The President's Cabinet is the deadhorse-whipping branch of S.G.A. It consists of, among others, the Activities Choirman who hires the bands that play with shrieking guitars and driving beat in the splendid salitude of Snavely ballroom; the Parking Chairman, who handles the mammoth prablem of arranging 300 cars on as many ocres; and the Spirit Chairman, who rides herd with paunding drum, clonging rattlers, and slightly embarrassed cheerleaders over our sometimes spirit.

Indeed, 'school spirit' is our deadest and mast fervently whipped, horse. The students, much to S.G.A.'s dismay and their own credit, have never greeted their basketball team with the brainless fervor of the Auburn fan. The Spirit Cammittee may someday realize (but not this year) that the best a de-emphasized athletic program can expect is a rather muted cheer.

honor council __

The Honor Council is composed of eight upper division students elected by the Student Government, the dean of the college, the dean of students, and the dean of women. The Honor Council's responsibility is to inform the students as to the nature of the honor system in effect at Birmingham-Southern College, to promote the observance of the honor code, and to try offenders.

Most 'Southern students come from high schools in which cheating is, by the mony, overtly condoned and practiced, and, by the ethical or fearful few, consciously ignored. Working with this raw material, the school has utilized the code and council to make classroom integrity a present, working, even if still unaccustomed, reality. Its hardest task has been, and is, to convince the student that ignoring another's offense is as harmful as committing the same offense aneself. Its great challenge is the clearer delineation and enforcement of the ethics of paper writing outside the classroom.

student advisory committee to the president

The Student Advisory Committee defines no aver-riding goal or purpose for itself. Dr. Phillips organized it at the beginning of the foll quarter in hopes that such a committee might be able to breech the durable wall of mutual misunderstanding that exists between student and administration. Toward this end, the committee simply discusses campus problems without attempting to provide immediate remedies.

The creation of such a committee is a hopeful sign to those who would like to see Sauthern achieve the unity implied in that much used term 'academic community.' From this promising start, it remains to be seen if the Student Advisary Cammittee will came to share the same limba accupied by the similarity conceived and now defunct Student Life Committee.

publications board

The Publications Board is the supervisory body for the three campus publications, Hilltop News, Quad, and Southern Accent. The board consists of the editors and business managers of the publications with the president and secretary of S.G.A. and three faculty members. The Board is to be commended in that it has never served as a means of administration censorship, always choosing to leave the actual running of the publications in student hands. The major criticism of the Board however, must be that it has never served to stimulate ony controversy which merited censorship.

The publications themselves are of varying quality, their major weakness being the narrowness of student participation.

The Hilltop News, in the past, has taken stances ranging from the gossipy passivity of the high school paper to the other extreme of conscious and opinionated aggressiveness. The 1963-64 'News has been, in general, conservative, well run, and in diligent search of a safe controversy.

Quad, in 1963-64, made an appeal for broader student contribution, but tenaciously clung to its carefully cultivated image as the haven of the iconoclast and the tortured intellectual.

The Southern Accent has ranged in format from artificial cynicism (1961) to last minute sloppiness (1962) and finally to an admixture of both of these, with a glaze of ivy-covered sentimentality in 1963. The quality of this year's product has yet to be determined.

the hilltop news

Believing that a college newspaper shauld adjust its policies each year to meet the requirements of evalving attitudes among students, the Hilltap News attempted to use its weekly four pages to reflect the progress of the campus toward its praclaimed goal—excellence.

Facts of news were printed, along with feature stories complementing and humanizing the facts, but, more important, we tried to clarify those areas where there was misunderstanding between "administration" and students. We refused to take sides, thereby allowing us the flexibility of criticizing where we felt there was an abuse of campus harmony.

Our purpose was to cantribute hanesty to news, interest to features, dignity to arguments, fairness to controversy, and active layalty to ideals. Perhaps we were successful. If not, we hape you accept our efforts with the same respect that we hold for yours.

Quad, the literary magazine for this campus, draws its material from those students who wish to give expression to creativity which goes beyond their academic studies. This year Quad is presenting two separate issues which, it is hoped, will give everyone interested a chance for creative expression in literature as well as other areas of productive thought.

Quad for this year, as in years past, offers to the interested student an appartunity to have his work published if only in a student magazine. Of the works submitted, the student editorial staff choases those works which they consider best, to be published in either the winter ar spring publication.

Quad makes only one request of its readers—give each selection o careful reading before passing judgment.

Each year it becames the unvaiced duty of the Southern Accent staff to present Birmingham-Southern College in a fresh and novel manner. The Accent, in past years, has pictured 'Southern as a harmoniaus campus with rolling green hilltaps, or has partrayed 'Southern through a series of "hilarious" cutlines, endowing the college with an over-abundance of school spirit.

Contrary to previous apinians, we feel that a callege annual by definition should be an honest pictorial resume of a specific callege during a specific year. This year we have tried to utilize a larger staff enabling us to give the attitudes and apinians of more than a few people. We have also braken new ground in that we have added more capy to each section, captioned pictures with names, and tried to cover each event of the callege with a critical shutter and pen.

Perhaps we have been too harsh in our interpretation, ar are the requirements of our definition too stringent? We make no apologies. At the same time we have not gone beyond our definition to appease a particular person, policy, ar group. Only through an honest evaluation of Birmingham-Southern College in 1963-1964 can this Southern Accent be of any value to you.

ADDS STEEL PIPE PRODUCING FACILITY

You're looking inside the new American Steel Pipe Division plant recently completed at ACIPCO and now in production. This new facility means additional employment, additional production, and additional growth for ACIPCO and for Birmingham. As has been said before, the success of one contributes to the other. We're proud of our mutual progress. And as the nation knows the name of AMERICAN as a leading source of quality cast iron pipe and steel tubing, you can be sure our steel pipe will take its important position. The men and women of ACIPCO are proud of the part our company and our people have played in contributing to the civic and cultural growth of the community. Yes . . . it is nice to live in Birmingham.

The Statue of Liberty is an important symbol to all Americans because it represents the freedom which is the foundation of our way of life. Our Company is proud to use it as its trademark.

Men to remain free must provide security for themselves and their families and most American families have found life insurance to be the best way to provide this security Liberty National Life Insurance Company is providing a large measure of security for many families. Over a third of a billion dollars is held by the Company for the protection of policyowners. Perhaps this financial strength is one of the reasons why more and more people each year buy their life insurance from Liberty National.
